Schedule 1 Objective of the rule

cl 3

This rule specifies the requirements for obtaining and renewing a driver licence in New Zealand. It sets out the requirements for the holder of a driver licence to obtain or renew a licence endorsement that will enable the endorsement holder to use a motor vehicle for specified activities. The rule also specifies the requirements for those who provide services related to the licensing of drivers.

The overarching objective of the rule is to make significant gains in land transport safety through the implementation of an improved system for driver licensing. Changes in the new system affect young and novice drivers, disqualified and unlicensed drivers, older drivers, commercial drivers, and overseas visitors and immigrants who wish to drive in New Zealand. These changes are aimed, in particular, at reducing the exposure of young drivers (between the ages of 15 and 24 years) to road crashes; reducing the crash risk of other novice drivers; reducing the numbers of drivers who drive while unlicensed or disqualified; having better-prepared and better-skilled drivers; improving enforcement and deterrence; improving driver attitudes; and developing a more positive road safety culture.

Major policy changes to the driver licensing system were authorised by the Land Transport Act 1998. These included the requirement to have photographs on driver licences, and the mandatory carriage of driver licences.

Within the framework of the major driver licensing policy changes, the rule gives effect to a new graduated classification system of licensing drivers so they have the necessary skills and experience to drive different types of vehicle. There are new testing requirements for obtaining a licence that emphasise skills, such as hazard perception, that are equally as important as vehicle-control skills for safe driving. The rule introduces ten-yearly licence renewal and relaxes the renewal regime for older drivers. It sets out a new system of driver licence endorsements and rationalises and updates the requirements for the medical and “fit and proper person” checking of drivers who drive for a living and drivers of specific classes or types of vehicles. The rule also introduces new requirements governing driver licensing course providers, driving instructors, and testing officers.

Many features of the previous driver licensing system are still relevant and these have been retained. In some cases, notably the Graduated Driver Licensing System, those features have been modified to improve them.

Schedule 2

Consultation carried out under section 161(2) of the Act

cl 4

In 1994, the Land Transport Authority (LTSA) began a major review of the system for licensing drivers in New Zealand, which has involved widespread public consultation. This has included the release in 1996 of 9 discussion papers outlining policy options for public comment. Five hundred and thirty-five formal submissions were received on the discussion papers. In response to a nationwide newspaper questionnaire, 41 000 members of the public expressed their views on the broad options for changes to the driver licensing system.

In March 1997, the LTSA released, for consideration by interested groups, government agencies, and the public, its proposed policies for changes to the driver licensing system. The proposed policy document was issued, in place of the usual first (red) draft of a proposed rule, in recognition of the widespread public interest in driver licensing and in order to seek comments and receive feedback from interested parties on the proposed changes. More than 4 000 copies of the document were issued and 554 submissions were received.

The submissions received on the proposed policy document, along with others received in the course of the review, were considered and decisions arrived at on proposed changes to the driver licensing system. These formed the policy framework for the first legal draft (yellow draft) of the Driver Licensing Rule.

The yellow draft rule was released for public consultation in November 1997. The draft rule was publicised in metropolitan and regional newspapers throughout New Zealand, in the New Zealand Gazette, and in other relevant publications. It was sent to libraries and transport authorities overseas and was made available on the Internet. Copies were also sent to individuals and organisations that had expressed an interest in the rule or who had commented on the proposed policy document. The LTSA received 85 written submissions on the yellow draft.

At the same time as the LTSA released the yellow draft of the rule, Parliament's Transport and Environment Select Committee sought public submissions on the Land Transport Bill, which authorised the major policy changes for the new driver licensing system. Submissions on the Bill closed on 28 February 1998 and the Select Committee held hearings in March/April 1998 to consider the submissions. The Land Transport Act 1998 was passed by Parliament on 3 December 1998.

The green draft rule was released for selected industry consultation, focussing on changes since the yellow draft rule on 4 December 1998. Meetings to discuss the green draft were held with industry representatives in Auckland, Christchurch, and Wellington. The LTSA received 41 written submissions on the green draft. Approval was given for the policy positions adopted in this rule by Cabinet in February 1999.

Overseas best practice and New Zealand's international obligations have been taken into account in developing the rule, and the rule has been subjected to overseas peer review. Privacy, civil liberty, and human rights have also been addressed and both privacy and human rights impact assessments have been prepared and made available to the public.
