Background in English

- (1) In its Te Reo Maori Report (Wai 11), the Waitangi Tribunal found that the Treaty of Waitangi was directed to ensuring a place for 2 peoples in New Zealand. The Tribunal found that the Māori language is an essential part of Māori culture and must be regarded as a taonga, a valued possession. The Tribunal questioned whether the principles and broad objectives of the Treaty of Waitangi could be achieved without a recognised place for the Māori language. The Tribunal found that the Crown is obliged by the Treaty to take active steps to protect the Māori language. The Crown accepted these findings:
- (2) In the litigation that culminated in the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in December 1993 (New Zealand Maori Council v Attorney General [1994] 1 NZLR 513), the Crown accepted that the principles of the Treaty of Waitangi impose a continuing obligation to take such steps as are reasonable to assist in the preservation of te reo Māori by the use of both radio and television broadcasting:

- (3) In that litigation, the Crown outlined a time frame relating to, among other things, the development of special purpose Māori television. The Māori Television Service is a key result of the policy developed for protecting and promoting te reo Māori on television:
- (4) The establishment of the Māori Television Service in which te reo Māori me ngā tikanga Māori have a secure place and are recognised and actively promoted is intended to contribute to meeting the Crown's commitment to the protection and promotion of te reo Māori me ngā tikanga Māori through broadcasting.
