

COVID-19 Public Health Response Amendment Bill (No 2)

Government Bill

As reported from the Health Committee

Commentary

Recommendation

The Health Committee has examined the COVID-19 Public Health Response Amendment Bill (No 2) and recommends by majority that it be passed. We recommend all amendments unanimously.

About the bill as introduced

The COVID-19 Public Health Response Act, which was enacted in May 2020, established a legal framework to support the public health response to COVID-19. The Act allows the Minister for COVID-19 Response, or the Director-General of Health in certain circumstances, to make COVID-19 orders. The orders give effect to the public health response to COVID-19.

The bill aims to enable the public health response to COVID-19 to continue to function in a coordinated and orderly way. It would make amendments to the Act that are informed by the experience of working with the Act since it commenced. The bill seeks to:

- extend the expiry date of the Act by one year, from May 2022 to May 2023
- improve the flexibility for making COVID-19 orders
- strengthen the infringement regime and deter non-compliance with orders
- support the effective management and operation of managed isolation and quarantine facilities (MIQF)
- enable a limited group of enforcement officers to stop vehicles at checkpoints.

Legislative scrutiny

As part of our consideration of the bill, we have examined its consistency with principles of legislative quality. We have no issues regarding the legislation's design to bring to the attention of the House.

Proposed amendments

This commentary covers the main amendments we recommend to the bill as introduced. We do not discuss minor, technical, or consequential amendments.

Orders that can be made under the Act

Power of the Director-General to make COVID-19 orders

Section 11 sets out the orders that can be made under the Act. The Minister can make orders under section 9, while the Director-General of Health can make similar orders under section 10. Section 10(a) provides that the Director-General's orders may only apply within the boundaries of a single territorial authority district. Under section 10(b), the Director-General must also believe that the order is urgently needed to prevent or contain the outbreak or spread of COVID-19 and is the most appropriate way of addressing those matters at the time.

Clause 6 of the bill, replacing section 10(a), would remove the limit that the order could only apply within the boundaries of a single territorial authority district. Instead, the Director-General could make COVID-19 orders that applied within any boundaries that were clearly described by reference to roads, geographical features, or some other practical way. The description would simply need to ensure the boundaries could be readily ascertained.

On 20 October 2021, the Regulations Review Committee wrote to us setting out its concerns about several provisions in the bill. It noted that the Minister's power under section 9 is subject to several safeguards but the Director-General's power under section 10 is not.

The Regulations Review Committee noted that the substance of the powers under sections 9 and 10 is nearly the same. It was concerned that the bill is unclear as to when Parliament intends the Minister to make an order, and when it intends the Director-General to make one. The Regulations Review Committee considered that, without a clearer distinction between the orders, the Director-General's power could be used instead of the Minister's. However, the Director-General's power would not have the extra safeguards and accountability of the Minister's power. We accept this recommendation and recommend amending section 10 accordingly by inserting paragraphs (c) and (d).

The Regulations Review Committee also believed that, given the lack of safeguards, the bill should be amended to place more limits on COVID-19 orders made by the Director-General. Section 14(4) of the Act provides that these orders expire 1 month after they come into force, unless sooner revoked or extended. We consider that this existing limitation is appropriate.

Interaction with powers under section 70 of the Health Act

Section 70 of the Health Act 1956 sets out the actions that a medical officer of health can take to prevent the outbreak or spread of any infectious disease.<sup>1</sup> The Regulations Review Committee expressed concern that the bill lacks clarity about when the Director-General would be expected to make orders under the COVID-19 Act and when they should make orders under the Health Act. It noted that the section 70 powers are very broad and are not limited by the need for urgency. Also, the enforcement powers applicable to each power are slightly different. The Regulations Review Committee considered that the bill should be clearer about the distinction between these powers and when Parliament intends that each should be used.

We understand that the powers in section 70 of the Health Act may only be exercised by a medical officer of health. Although the current Director-General of Health may exercise the powers of a medical officer of health due to his training as a public health doctor, this may not always be the case.

We note that the purpose of the COVID-19 Act is to support a public health response that avoids, mitigates, or remedies the actual or potential adverse effects of a COVID-19 outbreak. It also allows social, economic, and other factors to be taken into account, where it is relevant to do so. We were advised that, now that the COVID-19 Act is in place, the powers under section 70 of the Health Act would continue to be used for the purpose of preventing the outbreak or spread of other infectious disease in certain situations.

We understand that the purpose of retaining the powers in section 70 is to ensure that orders can be made that apply to specific individuals or specific or targeted groups. Conversely, a COVID-19 order is intended to enable the Director-General to respond to a situation where public health restrictions may need to be imposed urgently on an entire region or place. We note that it would not be appropriate to use a COVID-19 order for specific individuals and recommend amending clause 9 to insert section 12(2)(aa) to clarify the application of COVID-19 orders. Our proposed amendment would explicitly state that COVID-19 orders could not apply only to a specific individual.

Purpose of COVID-19 orders

Section 11(1)(a) provides that the Minister or Director-General can make an order to require people to refrain from taking any specified actions that contribute, or are likely to contribute, to the risk of the outbreak or spread of COVID-19. They can also require people to take any specified actions, or comply with any specified measures that contribute, or are likely to contribute, to preventing the outbreak or spread of COVID-19.

Clause 7 of the bill would replace section 11. It would expand the purposes for which orders could be made to allow for the ongoing management of COVID-19 rather than only its prevention. Proposed new section 11(1)(a) would enable the Minister or Director-General to require persons to take any specified actions or comply with any specified measures. The actions and measures would need to contribute, or be likely to contribute, to preventing, containing, reducing, controlling, managing, eliminating, or limiting the risk of the outbreak or spread of COVID-19.

We consider that this provision could be further strengthened. Therefore, we recommend amending section 11 to also enable COVID-19 orders to be made to avoid, mitigate, or remedy the actual or potential adverse public health effects of the COVID-19 outbreak.

Restricting movement in MIQF

Proposed new section 11(1)(b) specifies the actions or measures that the Minister or Director-General could require for an MIQF or other place of isolation or quarantine. The actions and measures would need to be for the purpose of managing the movement of people to, from, and within the MIQF or other place of isolation.

We consider that this section, as introduced, is not broad enough to capture the restriction of movement that could be needed in situations where people are self-isolating. We recommend amending section 11(1)(b) so that it would also apply to places of self-isolation. Consequently, we also recommend amending the definition of “room” in clause 5, amended section 5, to also include a place of self-isolation.

We were particularly interested in self-isolation, including the support that is available for people isolating at home and possible avenues for additional support. We also discussed the complaints process for self-isolation and would like to ensure that any process focuses on equity. We would expect a timely response to complaints to help improve services while people are still in isolation. We were advised that the situation is constantly evolving, and, as case numbers increase, agencies will need to work collaboratively with local communities. We understand that the bill would provide a legal framework to work towards this.

Power to close roads and public places and stop vehicles

Clause 12 would amend section 22 of the Act. Under proposed new section 22(3A), a constable could stop a vehicle at any road block or checkpoint. The checkpoint would need to have been established to enforce or monitor compliance with a COVID-19 order that restricts movement by people with or without a vehicle. Proposed new section 22(5) would also enable an enforcement officer to stop a vehicle for the purpose stated in section 22(3A) if they were acting under the supervision of a constable.

We note that this power, as introduced, would only apply to vehicles. However, the COVID-19 order could restrict the movement of people and vehicles. As a result, a person could leave their vehicle and walk through a checkpoint. Therefore, we recommend amending section 22(3A) and (5) to also enable people to be stopped.

Management of MIQFs and other places of isolation or quarantine

Clause 22 would insert new subpart 3B (sections 32J to 32T) into Part 2 of the Act. It relates to the management of MIQFs and other places of isolation or quarantine.

Operation of managed isolation allocation system

Proposed new section 32K provides that the chief executive of the responsible agency (currently the Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment) would be responsible for the operation of the managed isolation allocation system. New section 32L specifies that the Minister must determine how online and offline allocations for MIQFs are apportioned.<sup>2</sup> Under section 32N, the Minister would determine the eligibility criteria for offline allocations. The chief executive would determine the allocations based on those criteria.

The Regulations Review Committee noted that the determination of the eligibility criteria for offline allocations is more akin to a legislative decision than an administrative decision. It considered that the decision was legislative in nature because demand for allocations significantly outstrips supply, which prevents New Zealanders from entering the country. It considered that decisions about who should be eligible for an allocation could be more administrative if supply was adequate for demand. The Regulations Review Committee was concerned that the bill does not contain appropriate safeguards for the making of legislation. It recommended that section 32N be amended to describe the Minister's determinations of eligibility criteria for offline allocation as secondary legislation. Alternatively, section 32N could be amended to describe the types of matters the Minister would need to consider when making those determinations.

We agree that it would be useful to specify the criteria that the Minister would need to consider when deciding eligibility criteria for offline allocations. We recommend inserting section 32N(2A) to this effect. Our proposed amendment would require the Minister to consider the right of every citizen to enter New Zealand under section 18(2) of the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990 (NZBORA). The Minister would also need to take into account the need to mitigate the social, economic, and other effects of COVID-19.

Proposed new section 32M(2)(a) specifies that, when deciding online allocations, the Minister would need to take into account the rights of New Zealanders to enter New Zealand. We recommend amending this section to make it clear that this right is under section 18(2) of NZBORA.

<sup>2</sup> The bill defines an "online allocation" as an "allocation obtained by registering on the managed isolation allocation system online portal and obtaining a voucher". Offline allocations are places in MIQFs that are not made available online and must be manually applied for. Examples of offline allocations include allocations for emergencies, time-sensitive travel, and groups.

Failing to comply with conditions imposed in MIQFs or other places of isolation or quarantine

Proposed new section 32P would restrict the movement of people staying in an MIQF or other place of isolation or quarantine by requiring them to remain in their rooms except for a purpose specified in the section. New section 32P(2) provides that a person leaving their MIQF or other place of isolation would need to comply with any conditions that the chief executive imposed. As introduced, failure to comply with this requirement is not an infringement offence or a criminal offence. We recommend amending section 32P so that failing to comply with a condition or direction given under section 32P(2) would be an infringement offence under section 32P(6) or, where the failure is intentional, a criminal offence under section 32P(5).

Restricting a person to their room

Proposed new section 32P(3) specifies the circumstances when the chief executive could choose not to exercise their power under section 32P(1)(a). That section would require a person in MIQF or other place of isolation or quarantine to remain in their room except to undertake an activity authorised by the chief executive.

Proposed new section 32P(4) would enable the chief executive to consider the operational and resourcing implications for the MIQF or other place of isolation and quarantine when deciding whether to restrict a person to their room.

We understand that this provision is intended to apply only to the chief executive's decision under section 32P(3). However, we believe that section 32P(4), as introduced, could appear to restrict any movement out of rooms. Accordingly, we recommend amending the bill to make it clear that section 32P(4) would only apply to the chief executive's decision not to exercise their power under section 32P(1)(a).

We recommend inserting a provision that would require the chief executive to consider the impact on a person's rights under NZBORA when choosing not to allow access to activities outside rooms. We recommend inserting section 32P(4)(a) to this effect. We consider that our proposed amendment would maintain consistency with the rest of the Act, which explicitly refers to NZBORA throughout.

Offences relating to restriction of movement

Under proposed new section 32P(5)(b)(ii), a body corporate would be liable for a fine not exceeding $15,000 if they were convicted of failing to comply with section 32P(1). However, given that only individuals can be in MIQFs, we recommend deleting this provision.

Power to hold things

Proposed new section 32R would enable the chief executive to seize and hold anything that a person in an MIQF possessed or attempted to bring into the MIQF. The item would need to be in breach of the rules made under new section 32Q. We recommend amending section 32R by removing the references to "seize". Our proposed amendment would make it clearer that the bill does not contain a power to inspect items or search rooms without consent.

Information collection

Proposed new section 32T would require a person liable for the costs of MIQF under section 32E of the Act to provide their contact details. This provision is intended to support the invoicing of MIQF costs. However, we note that this would not capture situations where employers would be liable for the charges rather than the individual. We recommend amending section 32T(1) to make it clear that the person for whom the charges were payable would need to provide the contact details of the people who would be paying the charges.

Infringement offences

Clause 13, which would replace section 26 of the Act, relates to offences. Section 26 retains the offence of intentionally failing to comply with a COVID-19 order. It also retains the provision that it is an infringement offence if a person breached anything specified as an infringement offence in the legislation or a COVID-19 order and extends this provision to also include infringement offences specified in a rule made under section 32Q.<sup>3</sup>

Clause 23, which would replace section 33, contains the general regulation-making powers. It would enable the Governor-General by Order in Council to make regulations for infringement offences. Infringement fees could not be set at more than $4,000 for an individual or $12,000 for any other person. Fines could not be more than $12,000 for an individual or $15,000 for any other person. New section 33(1)(b) provides that the regulations could prescribe different penalties for different infringement offences or classes of infringement offences.

The Regulations Review Committee acknowledged that the COVID-19 orders contain a large number of infringement offences, which vary significantly in seriousness. However, it was concerned that the shift from the penalty being determined by Parliament to the Governor-General lacks essential safeguards. It considered that this concern could be addressed by requiring the Minister to recommend that the regulation-making power be exercised. The bill should also be amended to describe the matters that the Minister would need to consider before making the recommendation. We recommend amending section 33(1) to require the Minister to recommend that the regulations be made. We also recommend inserting section 33(1A) to specify the matters that the Minister would need to consider before recommending that regulations be made. The matters would be the severity and impact of the breaches, the appropriateness of the penalty for any group likely to be affected, and the penalties for comparable offences in other legislation.

We pointed out the sharp increase in fees and fines for infringement offences. For example, the bill would increase the maximum infringement fee for individuals from $300 to $4,000 and the infringement fine imposed by a court from $1,000 to $12,000. We discussed whether the increases are proportionate, appropriate, and would act as a deterrent for people who repeatedly failed to comply with COVID-19 orders. Our discussions included whether alternatives to fines, such as electronic monitoring, had been considered. We were advised that infringement offences are commonly used throughout the justice sector and that electronic monitoring would not be appropriate for infringement offences. For situations where people repeatedly breached COVID-19 orders, a person could be charged with a criminal offence and would go before the courts. They would be subject to a fine or imprisonment if convicted.

We understand that the process is under way to develop regulations to set an appropriate system for graduated infringement fees. A cross-agency working group is considering a range of matters related to the scheme, including ensuring that the higher penalties are not inequitable. We were advised that the maximum penalties would only apply to a very small proportion of infringement offences. The differentiation between offences would be based on the risk of transmission or spread of COVID-19.

Ensuring the privacy of contact tracing data

We understand that stakeholders have expressed concern that existing legislation has insufficient protections for data collected for COVID-19 contact tracing purposes. In particular, they are concerned that contact tracing data could be used by:

- the Police, and government agencies with enforcement powers, for the purposes of investigation or enforcement
- organisations in the private sector for marketing purposes
- employers for purposes other than health and safety
- individuals coercively against other individuals.

We note that these concerns could be mitigated by protections in a range of legislation. They include the Privacy Act 2020, the Judicial Review Procedure Act 2016, the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990, the Search and Surveillance Act 2012, and the Evidence Act 2006. However, we acknowledge that the various powers that exist in general legislation are not readily obvious or able to be enforced.

We recommend amending the bill by inserting clause 25A to include a provision as new section 34A, to clarify the privacy of contact tracing data. Information created or provided by members of the public through QR scans and paper-based forms for contact tracing purposes could only be used for public health purposes and could not be used by any person or organisation for any other purpose.

We also recommend inserting an offence for intentionally failing to comply with section 34A(1). An individual who was convicted would be liable for a prison term not exceeding 6 months or a fine not exceeding $12,000. For any other person, the fine could not exceed $15,000.

COVID-19 orders for the management of testing consumables and laboratories

Clause 7, new section 11, would empower the Minister and Director-General to make COVID-19 orders for the management of testing consumables (such as reagents and swabs) and laboratories. Under proposed new section 11(1)(d) an order could be made for laboratories that undertake COVID-19 testing to:

- set quality control measures and minimum standards
- require COVID-19 test results to be reported to the Director-General's public health national testing repository
- manage the supply of testing consumables used by the laboratories.

Proposed new section 11(1)(e) would also empower the Minister and Director-General to make an order to:

- requisition testing consumables from laboratories to use for, and reallocate to, the national public health response
- undertake COVID-19 testing solely for the purposes of the public health response to COVID-19.

Clause 8, new section 11A, provides that laboratories affected by orders made under section 11(1)(e) would be entitled to compensation from the Crown. The compensation would be at market rates for the consumables requisitioned and testing undertaken.

We recognise that the powers under new section 11(1)(e) are very broad, and considered how they might be limited. Some options were amending the bill to require additional scrutiny of an order, and removing the ability for the Director-General to make an order. Other options were narrowing the circumstances in which an order could be made, and imposing a maximum duration on orders.

We received advice that the purpose of the provisions is to ensure necessary tools are available to respond in the event of a significant resurgence of COVID-19 that threatens to overwhelm medical testing. We were also advised that the orders are not expected to be used routinely. We have therefore not recommended any amendments to these sections. However, some of us consider that the powers under this section are unnecessary and are not justified.

Warrantless powers of entry

Section 20(1) of the Act enables an enforcement officer to enter, without a warrant, any land, building, craft, vehicle, place, or thing. The enforcement officer must have reasonable grounds to believe that a person is failing to comply with any aspect of a COVID-19 order.

Some of us expressed concern that the bill does not amend section 20 of the Act to explicitly exclude marae. However, we understand that several other Acts contain powers to enter private homes without a warrant. Marae are generally not excluded where powers of entry are available over private property. Therefore, we were advised that any decisions about the appropriateness of warrantless powers of entry to marae would need to be considered in the context of other legislation that contains similar powers.

New Zealand National Party differing view

National opposes the COVID-19 Public Health Response Amendment Bill (No 2).

The bill is already out of date. The bill was introduced on 21 September and referred to the Health Committee on 29 September. Since then, in just over a month, the government has already signalled the following significant changes to COVID policy:

- the introduction of a traffic light system (the COVID Protection Framework) for the whole of New Zealand;
- limited changes to MIQ (in the short-term) and the prospect of more fundamental changes (in the medium-term);
- purportedly clearer rules for vaccination mandates for private sector employers; and
- a vaccination certification regime.

It is also worth noting that this bill reflects a world in which New Zealand's strategic aim with respect to COVID is elimination. Because of the government's clear failure to plan for Delta, the government has now been forced into a situation in which suppression is now the obvious goal of public policy (even if Ministers will not say so publicly). The bill was written in a world in which elimination was the stated aim of government policy and there was no back-up plan. It was assumed that elimination would work. When it did not, the government was left scrambling, as the rush of announcements summarised above indicates.

National opposes the bill for two major reasons.

First, the bill is predicated on a situation where highly restrictive border settings continue for the foreseeable future. The bill builds on the existing COVID-19 Public Health Response Amendment Act by adding further layers to the MIQ legal regime; when the goal of public policy should now be to dismantle the whole regime as much as possible.

At the time of writing, over 2,200 COVID cases and close contacts were isolating in the Auckland region at home, while fully vaccinated New Zealanders offshore without COVID were forced to endure the MIQ lottery in order to obtain one of a severely limited number of places in MIQ. The evidence suggests the risk that these travellers present to New Zealand is very low and 14 days MIQ is a disproportionate response to the risk they present, as public health experts have noted.

Since August 23, just two fully vaccinated travellers have tested positive for COVID in MIQ on day 8 or later.

National believes that MIQ should be dismantled for fully vaccinated travellers to New Zealand with negative pre-departure tests as a matter of priority. Enforcing MIQ on these travellers no longer makes any sense; and in fact it is callous and unfair.

Second, National strongly objects to clause 7, which allows COVID-19 orders to be made which may require the owner, or person in charge, of a specified laboratory that undertakes COVID-19 testing to deliver or use, in accordance with directions given under the order, specified quantities of COVID-19 testing consumables for the purposes of the public health response to COVID-19, and, undertake COVID-19 testing solely for the public health response to COVID-19.

The lack of widespread use of saliva testing in New Zealand has been a long and drawn out saga that reflects extremely poorly on the Ministry of Health and the Government. It is a national disgrace and there should be an urgent public inquiry on the matter.

The ministry spent much of the first half of this year casting doubt on the accuracy of saliva tests in comparison to nasal PCR tests, even though an existing private provider, Rako Science, had their test diagnostically validated in New Zealand laboratories, and Dr Anne Wyllie's work was being increasingly recognised in the United States and internationally. Associate Professor Janet Pitman from Victoria University says Rako's test "is similar if not better than the nasal swab test." Sir Brian Roche's Continuous Improvement Group even said to Minister Hipkins that there is a "strong case for adopting saliva testing as the main method for testing in New Zealand."

Saliva testing was recommended as an urgent priority by the Simpson/Roche review in September 2020. The roll-out was then delayed repeatedly, only getting under way in August 2021.

National members were shocked at the submission by Rako Science to the committee. Rako stated that:

Rako Science has had regular commercial discussions with the Ministry of Health procurement team in the last eight weeks at which a senior Ministry official repeatedly urged Rako Science to not reserve any of its testing capacity, provisioned for private sector customers, for a public health response. This occurred at the early stages of the current outbreak, when 10-hour queues and late reporting were regularly reported by media.

The Ministry's procurement team also repeatedly declares that it has NOT entered contract negotiations with Rako Science, despite claiming Rako Science as a Ministry provider in an email sent to industry.

Rako Science has also offered the Ministry a protocol from the University of Illinois which would allow us to process 8 times our current 10,000 per day testing capacity. This has not been taken up.

Beginning in March 2021, Rako Science has repeatedly offered to the Ministry of Health to license its technology, for a peppercorn fee, to publicly-owned laboratories to support the public health response. This offer has never been accepted or examined by the Ministry.

Rako Science has consistently offered to provide its services to the Ministry of Health and to the Minister for COVID-19 Response since December 2020. There is no impediment to contracting with COVID-19 testing laboratories to ensure contingent capacity to meet all pandemic scenarios.

National members do not understand the need for clause 7 of the bill. As Rako says, it gives draconian powers to the Minister of Health and the Director-General to direct and, through compulsory requisition, the ability to effectively nationalise testing laboratories for COVID-19. It will have a negative effect on New Zealand's reputation and disincentivise new investment in testing technology. The compensation provisions are inadequate.

For these reasons National does not support the bill.

Act New Zealand differing view

ACT opposes the bill in general. At a time when New Zealand should be moving towards less restrictive policies to re-establish normality after the pandemic, Parliament is considering a bill that will deepen and prolong highly restrictive policies.

One part of the bill deserves special mention. ACT strongly opposes the amendments to the principal Act set out in clause 7, being new sections 11(1)(c)-(d), and the consequential amendments in clause 8. These amendments would effectively allow the Government to confiscate property with impractical and restricted rights of appeal.

We heard from people who might be affected by these provisions, those who run laboratories. They said they have no way of knowing how they will deal with the new regulatory risk they face under these provisions. They do not know how they would satisfy existing contracts if their resources were requisitioned, or how they manage such a relationship.

The compensation provisions are highly unusual and impractical. The restriction of appeals to the District Court is an affront to the hierarchical structure that underpins courts in New Zealand and other civilised societies. The requirement for compensation at "market rates" is impractical and naïve, in the kind of circumstances that these provisions might be used.

The Government, in drafting this legislation, seems not to have considered that the net effect of the legislation might be to discourage investment in the very things it is trying to make abundant. Nor has it properly considered the effect on New Zealand's prosperity of legislation that so easily erodes New Zealanders' property rights.

Finally, the legislation needs to be seen in the context of a considerable public spat between the Ministry of Health and one of the submitters who might be subject to having their property seized by the Director-General of the Ministry of Health. In this light, the legislation can be seen as a way of settling a dispute, and something Parliament should block and certainly not be a party to.
